

Joshua Thomas is the vice president of communications at Target. In this role he oversees external and internal communications, which includes team member experiences and engagement. Throughout his more than 15-years at Target, Josh has led several industry-leading programs, most notably the reinvention of Target's owned brand portfolio, as well as countless headline-generating campaigns for Target's marquee design partnerships with brands like Missoni, Lilly Pulitzer and Hunter, among others. Josh is best known for his ability to build trust and confidence among the c-suite, his unwavering passion for demonstrating how creative, holistic and effective communications can help the organization realize its business goals, and his proven track record for galvanizing employees as empowered, informed and authentic ambassadors for the corporation.